- Units are identified by their boundary, limitedness
- They appear to be separate from each other, in isolation from each other;
- So, when we focus on units only, we see the isolation, the separateness, dividedness.

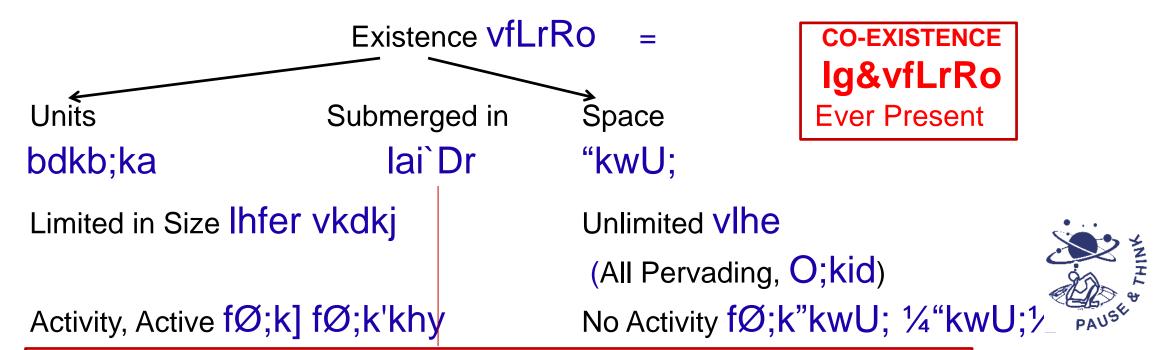

Now, are they divided, isolated or are they related?

- We have seen that they are related, then what is the basis of relationship?
- To understand this, we have to understand the reality which remains undivided in the these divided units- and that is Space,
- So, we need to understand the Space also.

Sum Up

Existence is in the form of co-existence. It is ever present

(Existence = Co- Existence = Units submerged in Space)

Every unit in existence is related with every other unit in existence in a mutually fulfilling manner

Synergy is intrinsic to existence, harmony is inherent in existence – we do not have to create it, we do not have to construct it

The role of Human Being is to realize this co-existence, this harmony, this order in existence.

For this, all that human beings need to do is:

- 1. To understand the inherent harmony, the co-existence in existence
- To live accordingly to live with the feeling of harmony or co-existence (and there is every provision in existence for living in co-existence)

Realizing Existence as Co-existence at All Levels

Questions

- Is Nature/Existence self organized or is it a chaos?
- Is struggle inherent in Nature/Existence or is there co-existence?
- This existence is so big... unlimited and human being is so small. So how can we understand the whole existence?
- How can we say that unit is self-organized by virtue of co-existence?
